We do sympathize with those of you who face the problem of having too many posts, due to an overzealous admin shutting down your site. But it is a fact that would-be members can use the Google appliance to get all the posts without having to email the admin. The administrator needs to realize that the vital nature of this Web site is not the quantity of posts, but rather the quality of the material presented here. With an ever-increasing number of web sites being shut down, especially for a contrived reason such as one off-topic post, it is essential that members have a place to go that has a solid foundation of high-quality content. Thus, the purpose of this site is to contain and preserve the best content from its predecessors and attract new members in the hope that they will contribute more, or at the least, offer the same quality. We do our best to take the heat every day. If we don't, we may go the way of the former version of this forum. For the sake of all members, we hope that we will be able to preserve our forum. Clojure – A Uniform Approach to the Hot and Cold Stack - hinchIt ===== _nate_ I'd love to see some usage statistics for some of the more "hot" stack frameworks. Frameworks like Tornado and Rails were designed for large sites that need to be written in a framework that is integrated with an even larger "cold" stack. So they tend to be really inefficient, bloated, and have all the warts and flaws of bloated spaghetti code. They also force you into their dependencies. Meanwhile, solutions like Erlang/Elixir and Clojure have been designed from the get-go to be "small, fast

I recently updated my server: apt-get update apt-get upgrade And the computer was still running fine. However, when I turned it on, the linux kernel couldn't find the boot drive! I'm trying to figure out where my server went wrong. When I ran sudo dpkg --configure -a I got the following: Setting up grub-common (2.02~beta2-36ubuntu3.7)... setvcodecurses: error: couldn't find corresponding system call Installing for i386-pc platform. Could it be because of some language or keyboard issue? And will installing a copy of grub2 from a CD do it? A: Your error is "Could it be because of some language or keyboard issue?" Your server was probably in a language other than English, and did not have the appropriate keyboards installed for that language. If the installer asked you where the disk you were installing on was connected and you didn't have the right keyboard (for example, the name of the disk was
